Terror charges highest since 9/11

Federal prosecutors charged more suspects with terrorism in 2009 than in any year since the attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, providing evidence of what experts call a rise in plots spurred by Internet recruitment, the spread of al-Qaida overseas and ever-shifting tactics of terror chiefs.

A review of major national security cases by The Associated Press found 54 defendants had federal terrorism-related charges filed or unsealed against them in the past 12 months.

The Justice Department would not confirm the figure or provide its own. But an agency spokesman said 2009 had more defendants charged with terrorism than any year since the 2001 attacks. The year that came closest was 2002, said the spokesman, Dean Boyd.

Bruce Hoffman, a terrorism expert at Georgetown University, called it "an extraordinary year, across the board," adding that the wide range of cases show al-Qaida "is in it for the long haul and we need to be as well."

The rate of terrorism charges accelerated in September, when authorities disrupted what they said was a burgeoning plot to detonate bombs aboard New York commuter trains. The quick pace of cases continued until the end of the year, with an attempted Christmas bombing aboard a Detroit-bound airliner.

One day alone was particularly heavy: On Sept. 24, federal prosecutors announced charges in five separate terrorism cases in Illinois, New York, North Carolina and Texas.

David Kris, the top terrorism official in the Obama administration's Justice Department, marveled at the volume of terrorism cases when he spoke at a conference of lawyers in November.

"The last several weeks or months have been kind of a crucible experience for us," Kris said.

David Burnham of Transactional Records Access Clearinghouse, a private group at Syracuse University that analyzes government prosecution data, urged caution in counting terrorism charges.

"You have to be careful because everyone's got a different way of doing it," Burnham said.

What counts?

What truly constitutes a terrorism case can be a matter of legal and political debate.

In counting major terrorism cases, the AP used a rigorous standard that produced a conservative count. The various charges that made the list include conspiring to provide material support to terrorists, conspiring to murder people abroad and conspiracy to use a weapon of mass destruction. The list also includes some cases that did not involve Islamic terrorists, such as the kidnapping of a U.S. citizen in Panama.

But the 54 defendants do not include, for example, those charged only with lying to agents in a terrorism investigation, or the Army psychiatrist in the Fort Hood military base shooting who faces nonterrorism murder charges brought by military prosecutors instead of civilian charges. Nor do the 54 include the five Washington, D.C.-area youths charged in Pakistan. If all those cases were also added—and some commentators do count them—the total number of defendants would be 63.

"He's a freakin' genius, a really smart guy—and he's a good guy."

—Barber, talking about Richard Heene

Doc maker supports balloon boy's dad

Once Richard Heene admitted in court that he wrongly sent authorities on a wild goose chase across Colorado to save the son he thought was aloft in a runaway balloon, friends and supporters seemed to take off just about as fast as that balloon.

All except for one: Steven C. Barber, a 48-year-old filmmaker who says he still believes Heene really thought his son was in the balloon as it spun wildly through the skies on Oct. 15. He plans to prove it, Barber says, when he releases the documentary "Balloon Boy: Guilty Until Proven Innocent" later this year.

Barber has known Heene for more than 10 years and says he has dozens of hours of film of the backyard inventor pursuing one science project after another. He compiled much of that footage, the filmmaker says, in an effort to help Heene land a TV reality show chronicling his science adventures.

What Heene was trying to do with the balloon, Barber says, was solve the world's traffic problems by creating a cheap, lighter-than-air vehicle that would allow people to float over congested freeways.

Although the idea may sound far-fetched to some, even ridiculous to others, Barber says, Heene is a "mad genius" with a penchant for exploring offbeat scientific theories.

NOTABLE

Filmmaker Steven C. Barber, whose previous films include the World War II-era documentary "Return to Tarawa: The Leon Cooper Story," acknowledges he is announcing his plans for "Balloon Boy" just as he is beginning to promote another movie.

A Taco Bell diet? Fat chance of that

Maybe you've seen the commercials for Taco Bell's Drive-Thru Diet in which an appropriately handsome middle-age woman claims to have shed weight based on her adherence to the "fresco" cuisine at Taco Bell.

At first, I thought this ad campaign must be a joke—that Taco Bell was satirizing the Jared Subway commercials—but it turns out they are for real. Without any hint of irony whatsoever, Taco Bell is telling you to start a diet by eating its food.

I am always shocked—shocked!—by the stupidity of this world, but this Taco Bell campaign must now certainly be the new Dumbest Thing of All Time.

Keep in mind this is the fast food chain restaurant that rose to prominence strictly in concordance with an increase in the average American's marijuana intake. Wasn't it one of the first fast food chains to stay open until midnight and then 2 a.m.? Isn't Taco Bell the establishment heralding the joy of the "fourth meal," otherwise known as the "dude, I'm so high that these lights look like teeny, tiny civilizations" meal?

And now Taco Bell wants us to use its food to trim our waistlines? Are you corporate hacks out of your cheesy gordita minds?

Again, Taco Bell entirely misses the irony that while it runs these Drive-Thru Diet commercials, it's also filling up the airwaves with its latest innovation in the ass-expanding fast food culinary tradition: the new "Beefy 5-Layer Burrito."

This concoction includes a "hidden layer" of nacho cheese, which is kind of like dribbling a basketball that contains a "hidden layer" of bricks. In addition to nacho cheese, it sports beef, sour cream, cheddar cheese and enough refried beans to send a horse into sodium shock. It has 550 calories and 22 grams of fat.

This, my friends, is the Taco Bell I know and love.

Because let's face it: If you're going through the drive-through window at Taco Bell often enough that you decide you might as well incorporate it into your new diet, you are in no way going to tackle your weight problem. You will not be ordering "fresco" tacos.

No, you will end up ordering some amalgamation of beans, beef, cheese and more cheese. When faced with a choice between a few slices of grilled chicken and some watery lettuce or three chili cheese burritos and the Nachos Bell Grande (my standard order), what do you think the little devil on your shoulder will tell you to do?

So please drop the charade, Taco Bell. Don't make apologies.

And please, continue to come up with insanely awesome burritos like the Beefy 5-Layer—all of those teeny, tiny civilizations in the lights depend on it. STEPHEN MARKLEY IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

Conan rally lands in Chicago

Chicago Tribune

To Mike Mitchell, Conan “Coco” O’Brien is an orange-haired, smart-alecky Everyman.

Now, courtesy of Mitchell’s social networking, O’Brien’s biggest Chicago supporters will hold a rally at 4:30 p.m. Monday on NBC’s Michigan Avenue doorstep to deliver a message to the network.

“NBC, I think, has already made their mind up,” said Mitchell, 27, an L.A.-based freelance illustrator. “Maybe (the protest) is more of a thing to show that there’s a lot of Conan fans.”

O’Brien publicly refused to push back the start of “The Tonight Show,” which he hosts, so that NBC could rescue former host Jay Leno’s prime-time ratings bomb. It seems O’Brien will leave the network, and Mitchell said he thinks the comic’s problems have touched a nerve.

“A lot of people have really crappy bosses,” Mitchell said. “They can really relate.”

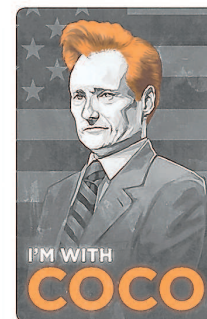

Mitchell administers the “I’m With Coco” Facebook page—at 276,000 fans and climbing—and has other rallies planned for Monday in L.A., New York and Seattle.

He also illustrated the seminal image for the “I’m With Coco” movement, a black-and-white portrait of a grim O’Brien, the only color the bright orange in his hair and in the nickname, “Coco,” which originates from a skit on the late-night show. Other Facebook users have appropriated the image for similar groups, but Mitchell’s has the most followers.

Mitchell, who lived in Chicago from 2004 to 2006, will be attending the L.A. rally.

About 1,400 RSVP’d yes for the California rally and, as of Sunday afternoon, about 400 promised to attend the Chicago gathering at Pioneer Court in front of the NBC building downtown. Mitchell wants rally attendees to wear orange, bring signs and be civil.

Fans will be “there to kind of have fun and support somebody who’s kind of being (dumped) on publicly,” he said.

Legal expenses add up quickly for gay couples

Chicago Tribune

If Howard Wax and Robert Pooley Jr. were a heterosexual couple, they could’ve gone to their nearest Cook County clerk’s office, paid $40 for a marriage license and been wed.

That would have provided them an array of legal protections, including the right to make medical decisions for one another and the ability for one to inherit the other’s property.

Instead, the couple paid $10,000 for an attorney to help them simulate the protections marriage affords using wills, trusts and powers of attorney. It was a price the men—parents of 3-year-old twins—were willing to pay for peace of mind, though they admit it’s far from perfect.

“I feel at least like we’re secure now,” said Wax, who has been with Pooley for nine years. “It’s not perfect, but we’re OK.”

Across the country, there has been a surge in gay and lesbian couples making such arrangements to protect themselves in states such as Illinois, which does not recognize same-sex marriage or civil unions. As the nation continues to fiercely debate gay marriage, some proponents cite the added financial burden in casting it as not just a civil rights issue but an issue of economic fairness.

“Gay couples have to go to an attorney, have a will drawn up, get durable powers of attorney. Not only is it a financial expense, but many of those things can be challenged by people’s biological families,” said Rick Garcia, political director for the gay and lesbian rights group Equality Illinois.

It can be a difficult reality for many same-sex couples to face. Melissa Walker and Erin Ferguson had a wedding ceremony in Chicago in 2008. A couple of friends who are attorneys offered their services as a gift, helping the couple prepare powers of attorney and wills.

Now Walker is eight months pregnant and said it will cost about $2,000 for Ferguson to adopt the child, along with other legal costs to ensure their parental rights are protected.

“I’m pretty bitter about it,” Walker said. “It’s just really unfair. Erin and I are spending thousands of dollars out of our savings account. How does it benefit anyone when our child is going to come into this world with a less economically sound family?”

Most estate attorneys advise straight couples to have legal safeguards like wills and powers of attorney, but they aren’t absolutely necessary.

“There are protections under the law that would help a heterosexual couple if they didn’t have those protections in place,” said Christopher Clark, senior staff attorney in the Midwest Regional Office of Lambda Legal. “A same-sex couple, without these steps, has no legal protection.”

Even with carefully laid-out legal plans, Clark said same-sex couples still have cause for concern: “If a gay couple has put together a health care power of attorney and there’s a medical crisis, depending on where the crisis occurs and who you run into, there may not be a presumption that the document is valid. We’ve had horrible situations where someone winds up in the emergency room in critical condition or even dying, and the person’s partner is not allowed access to them, regardless of the documents.”

Wax said he thinks marriage rights for same-sex couples will come eventually.

“I don’t care if they call it a tostada,” Pooley said. “I just want the legal issues to be settled out.”

Remembering MLK

Chicago Tribune

Claude Lerner was about 10 when the black preacher from the South spoke at his Kenwood home in 1966.

The boy from Chicago's South Side didn't fully grasp the implications of segregation or racial injustice. He wasn't aware it was unconventional for a man with darker skin to be the honored guest in a white family's home.

But from the second-floor landing, as he listened to the rich and powerful voice of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., little Claude was moved.

"There was this spine-tingling sense of hope," he said. "And a very positive notion of the future. It was magical, really."

Today, some of the places that King visited during his months-long crusade in Chicago in 1966 have changed dramatically, while others reflect the same struggles of the 1960s.

The three-story red brick home in the 4900 block of South Greenwood Avenue is a lesser-known haven for King's message of equality during the Chicago Freedom Movement. It also experienced some of the backlash: The Lerner family received much hate mail—once containing feces—after the civil rights advocate's appearances at fundraisers that packed the home. Lerner suspects that many in those crowds wouldn't have believed the nation would elect an African-American president and that he would live just a few blocks away in Kenwood.

MARTIN LUTHER KING JR. DAY CLOSINGS

Monday is Martin Luther King Jr. Day, a federal holiday. The following public services will be affected:

Schools: Chicago public schools will be closed. Most suburban schools will be closed; check with each local district.

Government offices: Federal, state, county and city offices will be closed.

Postal service: All post offices will be closed, and only express mail will be delivered.

Courts: Federal, state and county courts will be closed, with the exception of Cook County Central Bond Court.

Banks: Most banks will be closed.

VOLUNTEER OPPORTUNITIES

Martin Luther King Jr. Day was declared a national day of community service in 1994 to build on the civil rights leader's legacy. If you are looking for a way to volunteer Monday, go to mlkday.gov. Here are events in Chicago to commemorate King:

» Elected officials are hosting volunteer projects that include helping seniors winterize their homes and painting school classrooms. Volunteers can show up from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday at 5533 N. Broadway or 4327 N. Lincoln Ave. or reply to jen@heathersteans.com.

» DuSable Museum is hosting an all-day celebration Monday, featuring theatrical and dance performances, animated films and two special symposiums to discuss the experiences of civil rights activists. The museum is open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at 740 E. 56th Place.

» DePaul University will host a series of events, including a re-enactment of King's 1967 "A Time to Break Silence" speech at a 7:30 a.m. prayer breakfast Monday in the DePaul Student Center, 2250 N. Sheffield Ave., Room 120. For more information, visit events.depaul.edu.

Quinn inks cemetery oversight law

Gov. Quinn signed the state's Cemetery Oversight Act into law Sunday.

The governor's office says the new law creates a regulatory structure for the Illinois funeral and cemetery industries and provides oversight and regulation over cemeteries in the state. The new law comes after former workers last year allegedly dug up graves in a scheme to resell burial plots at Burr Oak Cemetery in south suburban Alsip.

Sharpton criticizes Robertson in Chicago

The Rev. Al Sharpton, who visited Chicago today to ask churches to contribute to Haitian relief funds, took umbrage at comments by an evangelical broadcaster that the people of Haiti might have brought upon themselves the earthquake that left tens of thousands dead. Christian televangelist Pat Robertson said last week on his TV show that slaves in Haiti swore a pact to the devil to obtain their freedom from French colonial authorities more than 200 years ago.

Cops warn of robberies near UIC

Police issued a community alert Saturday warning of strong-arm robberies near the University of Illinois at Chicago campus on the Near West Side.

Three robberies occurred near the UIC campus between Jan. 9 and 12, police said. The victims were approached by two suspects from behind, beaten and knocked to the ground, police said.

Cabbie charged in Rogers Park fire

A cab driver who lived in a Rogers Park apartment building where a man died in a fatal fire last week allegedly set the blaze because he had been having a dispute with two female neighbors, officials said.

Mahad Ali Hassan, 26, of 6720 N. Sheridan Road, was charged with first-degree murder, aggravated arson and aggravated unlawful use of a weapon. He was ordered held without bond Sunday by Cook County Circuit Court Judge Peggy Chiampas.

Safe haven law draws controversy

Chicago Tribune

In her blue, jail-issue uniform, Matisha Goens, 28, appeared in Domestic Violence Court last week, her head down and her voice barely audible.

Her alleged crime? Leaving her 8-month-old daughter at a South Side police station, wearing a pink jacket and wrapped in a Winnie the Pooh blanket. Officers found the baby New Year's Day, taking in all the activity from her stroller.

Even though the toddler appeared to be well cared for, she is beyond the age in which parents can relinquish newborns anonymously and without fear of prosecution, causing some to wish for more discretion and others saying that support, not legislation, is a better way to address discarded children.

On Jan. 4, Goens was arrested at her home in the 7000 block of South Crandon Avenue and charged with misdemeanor child neglect. In September, Goens was picked up on a similar charge when police allegedly found the same girl—now in the custody of her father—alone in a car at a Department of Motor Vehicles facility.

"On one hand, this child is well past the [legal] return date" of one month, said Chicago police Lt. Laurel Bresnahan, part of the Special Victims Unit involved with the case. "On the other hand, we see kids who have been hideously abused ...

and this is exactly what you want a parent to do."

But where to draw the line? All states have "safe haven" laws that allow a parent to leave a child at a designated place—such as a hospital, fire or police station—to keep babies from being abandoned in places such as parking lots and bathrooms.

But the legislation also has generated controversy, with experts split over age limits or even whether such well-intended laws are helpful to desperate parents. In Illinois, 53 children have been dropped off legally since the safe haven law took effect in 2001. Of the 58 babies abandoned illegally since 2001, only 28 survived, according to the Save Abandoned Babies Foundation.

Dems pull out the stops in Massachusetts race

8 BOSTON His agenda potentially imperiled by the outcome of a close U.S. Senate race, President Obama focused his attention and prestige Sunday on Massachusetts Democrat Martha Coakley, whose bid to succeed the late Sen. Edward M. Kennedy has gone from shoo-in to nail-biter.

Obama joined Coakley at a Sunday afternoon rally at Northeastern University in Boston as the race entered the final stretch.

It was the latest and highest profile assist for Coakley, the state attorney general facing a strong challenge from Scott Brown, a Republican state senator.

EARLIER, IN WASHINGTON ...

President Obama on Sunday recalled the work of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. as he urged those packing a Baptist church to take heart in hard times and celebrate progress—however small.

Coakley campaigned Saturday with Kennedy's widow, Vicki, who has also appeared in a TV ad for Coakley. On Friday, thousands attended a rally for Coakley headlined by former President Bill Clinton and the state's senior senator, John Kerry.

Even in Massachusetts, a solidly Democratic state represented by the proudly liberal Kennedy for nearly 47 years, Brown has ridden a wave of populist anger over Obama's health care overhaul, taxes and government spending.

Only a blip in the polls until recently, Brown has captivated Republicans and many independents by his promise to slow the Obama agenda in Washington.

Polls show the race too close to call for Tuesday's special election.

Campaigning Saturday, Coakley called Obama's visit "pretty cool" but said it didn't indicate her candidacy was in trouble.

Violence hurting Haiti relief efforts

9 Some incidents of violence in Haiti have hindered rescue workers trying to help earthquake victims, a top official leading the U.S. government's relief efforts said Sunday.

Providing humanitarian aid requires a safe and secure environment, said Lt. Gen. Ken Keen of the U.S. Southern Command. While streets have been largely calm, he said, violence has been increasing.

"We are going to have to address the situation of security," Keen said. "We've had incidents of violence that impede our ability to support the government of Haiti and answer the challenges that this country faces."

Keen said about 1,000 U.S. troops are in Haiti and that 3,000 more are working from ships.

More than 12,000 U.S. forces are expected to be in the region by Monday.

GAINES ADAMS 1983-2010

Adams' death stuns Bears

Chicago Tribune

Gaines Adams, the 26-year-old defensive end the Bears hoped would jump-start their pass rush, died of cardiac arrest Sunday in his hometown of Greenwood, S.C.

Adams

A kind and quiet personality who was added to the mix in an October trade, Adams was not known well by his new team.

An initial coroner's report revealed Adams had an enlarged heart, a physical abnormality for a 6-foot-5, 258-pound athlete who had a freakish combination of skills that led from him playing eight-man football in high school to becoming an All-American at Clemson and then the fourth pick of the 2007 draft by the Buccaneers.

Adams is the second NFL player to die in a month. Bengals wide receiver Chris Henry died from injuries suffered from a fall out of a truck in North Carolina. Adams' girlfriend called an ambulance Sunday morning and he was transported to the emergency room at Self Regional Healthcare at 7:14 a.m. and was pronounced dead at 8:21 a.m., according to Greenwood County chief deputy coroner Marcia Kelley-Clark.

Adams is survived by a son and a daughter.

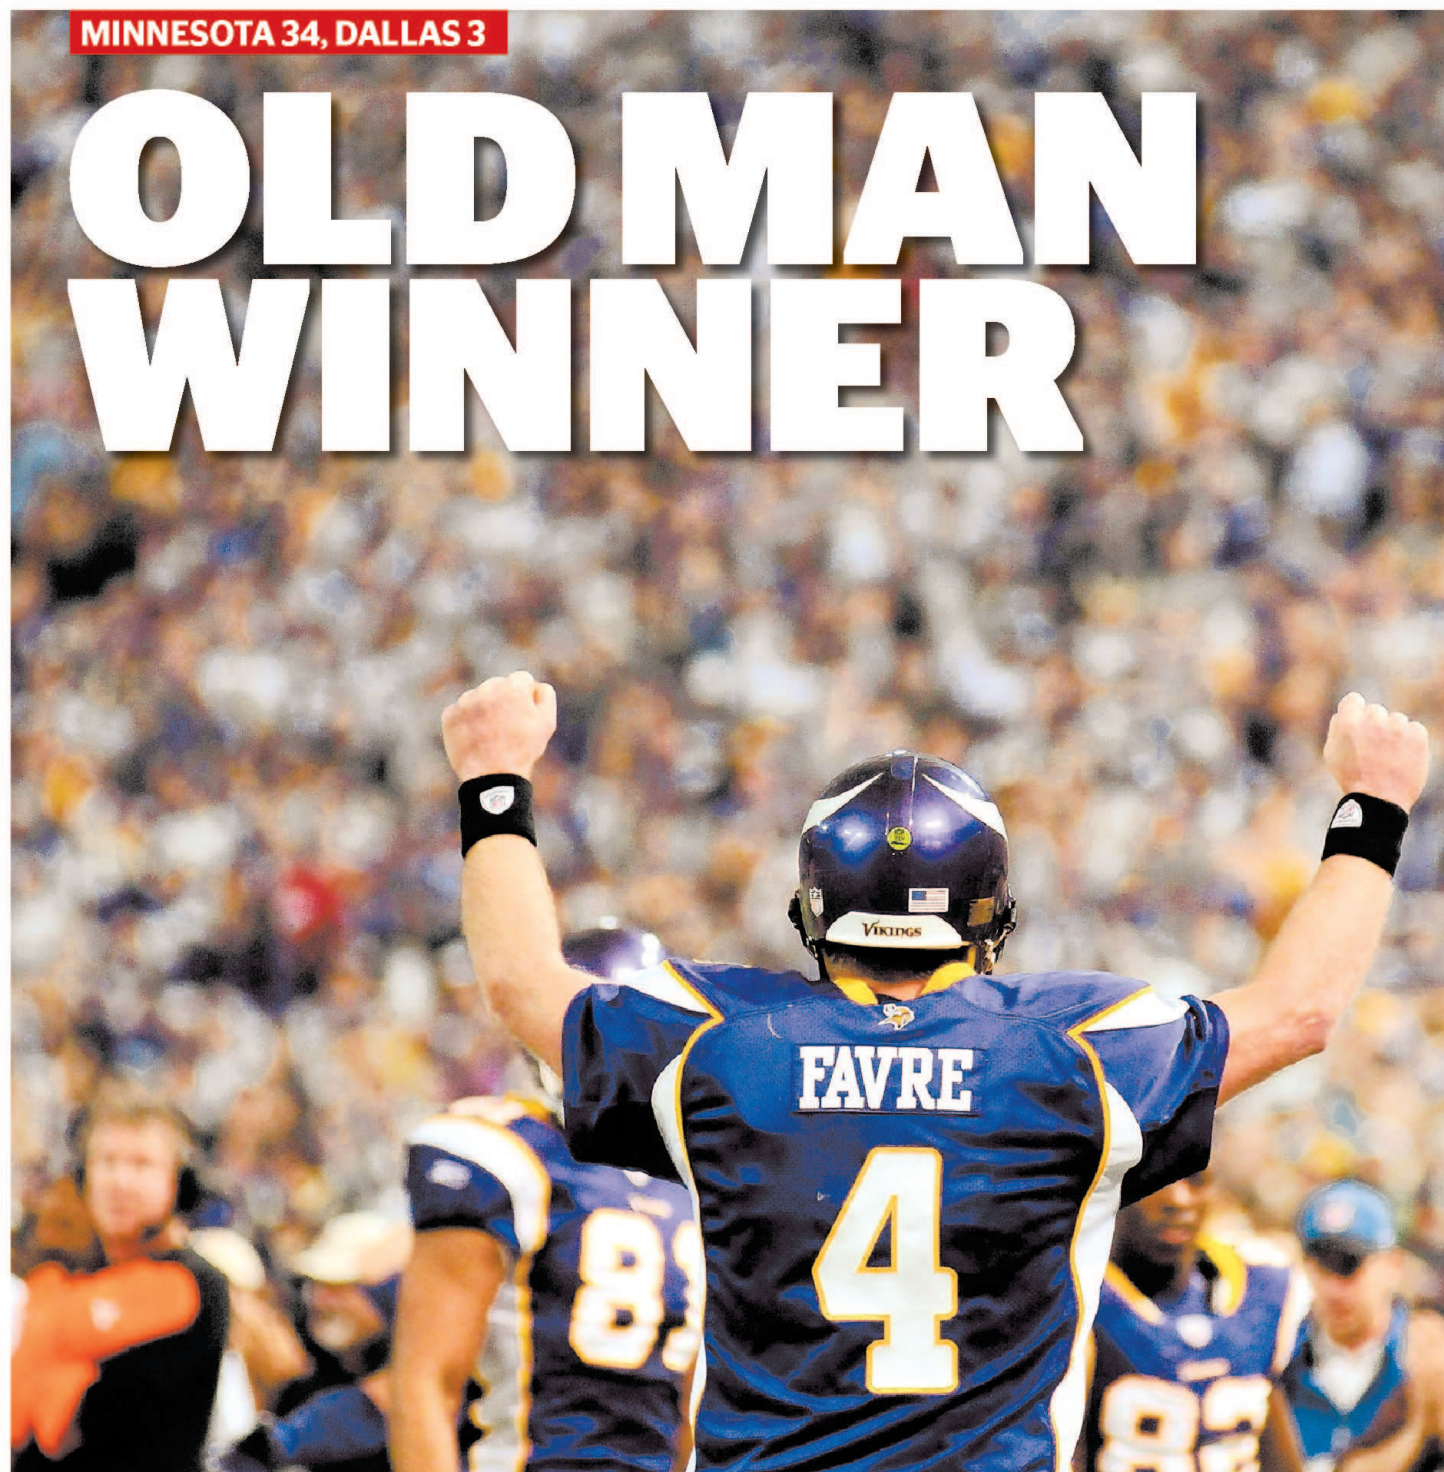

The Bears issued a brief statement: "We are stunned and saddened by the news of Gaines' passing. Our prayers are with his family during this difficult time."

Adams was acquired from the Bucs on Oct. 16, when the Bears traded a second-round draft pick for him. Given general manager Jerry Angelo's reluctance to part with draft picks, it speaks volumes about how the organization felt about Adams.

He played sparingly in 10 games but had two tackles and a forced fumble in the season finale at Detroit.

THE WHIZZER REPORT

J-E-T-S, Jets, Jets, Jets.

Longtime readers know of my affection for the Jets, but I went against my better judgment in my playoff predictions Friday. I paid for it.

After Sunday's N.Y. upset, I will not do that again. Until Friday, when I'll predict they'll be crushed by Indianapolis.

Here now, my stellar picks.

Arizona at New Orleans

Prediction: New Orleans 40, Arizona 33

Brett Favre's return rewarded with trip to NFC championship after Minnesota demolishes Dallas

Chicago Tribune

It was supposed to be too late for Brett Favre.

Too late in his career. Too late in the season. Too late to make it work with his head coach.

He was supposed to be on a tractor by now.

Instead he was helping the Minnesota Vikings' offense plow through a Dallas defense that had been one of the league's best in a 34-3 victory Sunday that earned the Vikings the right to meet the Saints in the NFC championship game in New Orleans.

The 40-year-old Favre performed like a much younger man, throwing for four touchdowns and posting a 134.4 passer rating. He also played like a much younger man, celebrating big completions with chest bumps, side bumps and fist pumps.

He smiled a lot too, with a grin that seemed to stretch from Minneapolis to Green Bay.

"This," Favre said, "is what I came back for."

THE REST

N.Y. Jets 17, San Diego 14

Maybe Rex Ryan already knows the score of the AFC championship game, too.

The rookie coach who, at one point, didn't know his Jets were still in playoff contention, then declared them Super Bowl favorites, will need some more bold predictions.

His Jets are still playing.

Rookies Mark Sanchez and Shonn Greene led New York to a stunning 17-14 upset of San Diego in the divisional playoffs Sunday, each providing a touchdown in the fourth quarter that marked another Chargers post-season pratfall.

"It's a big win for our franchise," Sanchez said, "and we're not done."

Indianapolis 20, Baltimore 3

Colts coach Jim Caldwell put a premium on speed for the playoffs.

He wanted his defense to play faster—even if it meant giving up a shot at perfection, taking a few extra days off and perhaps missing a couple of assignments.

Mission accomplished.

Indianapolis' defense dominated Baltimore on

If this is over the hill, we all can handle it.

"He's gotten better and better every game," said Vikings tight end Visanthe Shiancoe, who caught a fourth-quarter touchdown pass from Favre.

Favre said he was playing with as much enthusiasm as ever.

"I know how difficult it is to win a playoff game, regardless of age," he said. "I probably appreciate it a little more than the other guys in the locker room, especially the younger guys."

Sixty percent of Favre's passing yards went to Sidney Rice. Rice had six catches for 141 yards and three scores Sunday.

As remarkable as Favre to Rice was, the Vikings' defense might have been even more impressive, coming up with six sacks and three takeaways.

"We put on a nice show today, coverage and rush," defensive tackle Kevin Williams said.

Saturday night, limiting the run-first Ravens to just 87 yards and two first downs on the ground.

"That was one of our goals," Caldwell said Sunday when asked if the Colts looked as fast on video as they did in person.

New Orleans 45, Arizona 14

With nine double-digit victories during the regular season, the New Orleans Saints weren't all that surprised by the way they dominated their playoff opener.

"I don't think anyone in this locker room ever lost confidence in what we were capable of doing," Saints receiver Marques Colston said. "You don't just win 13 games in this league by accident."

Colston and his teammates gathered at the Saints' suburban New Orleans training center Sunday to review their 45-14 rout of the Arizona Cardinals in Saturday's divisional playoff game.

"There have been some lean years for the Saints. I've been a part of a few of them," Saints right tackle Jon Stinchcomb said. "To be able to be here when I think something special is going on, it's quite an honor."

AP CONTRIBUTED.

Kick me, I'm Kaeding

You wouldn't want to be Nate Kaeding right now.

San Diego's Pro Bowl kicker missed three—THREE—field goals in the Chargers' loss Sunday. At home. In the most important game of his career.

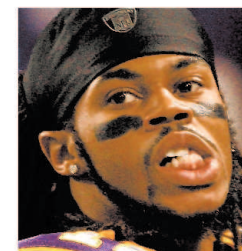

Don't be surprised if he's out of a job soon. At the least, he should be out of the country, like right now.

1 What in sports is more exciting than a hockey shootout?

Getting some nachos with the proper chip-to-cheese ratio.

Halftime at a Washington Wizards game.

When the seeker catches the golden snitch! (Which makes as much sense as a shootout.)

Ask Gilbert Arenas or Marvin Harrison.

A Super Bowl kickoff. If only because it puts an end to the overdone hype.

2 What did Sunday's Blackhawks win at Detroit mean to you?

A day closer to April and the start of the real season.

Sorry, must've missed that while I was rolling on the floor laughing at Tony Romo and the Cowboys.

That Chicago is finally better than Detroit in every possible way.

It meant a nice break from hearing Joe Buck spew "that's Brett Favre being Brett Favre!"

I feel better about this team now. They can win anywhere at anytime. Scary good.

3 What did we learn from the Cubs Convention?

The Ricketts family are lovely people who haven't done squat to improve the team so far.

That the proposed additions to Wrigley Field are sorely lacking. No panic rooms?

There's a new sucker—I mean Cubs fan—born every minute.

"Weedies" is no longer part of Geovany Soto's diet. No munchies = losing 40 pounds.

The "L" flag will still fly at Wrigley after losses. Duh. It'll fly a lot this season.

4 How relieved are you that David Beckham says he'll keep playing after the World Cup?

Incredibly. Now I can go back to my bourbon and hookers.

Please let this man and his few remaining devotees go away quietly.

So relieved, otherwise what will he do besides spend his millions and bed Posh Spice?

The only Beckham that matters is on the South Side.

When I hear Beckham's name, I get relieved, but not in the sense you're talking about.

5 Why was Fox already previewing the Daytona 500 during the NFL playoffs?

I can't answer this because I don't have a clue when the Daytona 500 takes place.

Trend alert: Fuel inefficiency will be really big this year. As will armpit stains.

Because it will be the lead-in to the new Conan O'Brien show!

Because they can't officially start promoting the Conan O'Brien show—yet.

To inject some excitement into an otherwise boring game.

If a missing tooth is causing you to chew less then you might not only be missing out on the tortilla chips, you might be missing some bone as well.

You see, the jawbone needs the chewing action of teeth to keep it strong. Otherwise it disappears like a bowl of guac and chips at a super bowl party. Poof! Blackhawks winger Patrick Sharp, left, beats Red Wings goalie Jimmy Howard for the winning goal in a shootout Sunday in Detroit. AP

BLACKHAWKS 4, DETROIT 3 (SO)

Shooting stars

DETROIT It was a much different Red Wings team Sunday than the last time the Blackhawks visited their archrival.

Back on Dec. 23, the Wings were decimated with injuries to several of their top players. This time around, the Wings were a lot healthier with Henrik Zetterberg, Dan Cleary, Brian Rafalski and Jonathan Ericsson back in the lineup.

It didn't matter.

Much like the last meeting, the Hawks got superb goaltending from Antti Niemi and timely offense and came away with a thrilling 4-3 shootout victory. The Hawks increased their winning streak to three games, including the first two on their season-long, eight-game road trip.

Niemi, who shut out the Wings 3-0 in that Dec. 23 contest, was outstanding again as he made 35 saves—including a brilliant stop on Zetterberg in overtime—to improve to 12-3-1 on the season. Patrick Sharp scored the game-winner in the shootout and also scored in regulation, while Troy Brouwer had a goal and an assist and Patrick Kane added a goal.

"They got three or four players back from the last time we played them, and obviously you could tell," said Hawks winger Marian Hossa, who scored to extend the shootout to the fourth round. "They played really well. It was an even game and could go both ways, and we got lucky at the end.

"It's a great start for us going on the long road trip. We got the first two wins on the road and it always helps with the confidence."

Niemi was sensational as he won for the fourth time in the second of back-to-back road games this season. In addition to Dec. 23, the Finnish goalie also recorded victories in Vancouver and Pittsburgh under similar circumstances.

"This is a good start on our road trip," Niemi said. "It's great to get points in the first games so you don't get stuck with zero points."

» Mark McGwire received a standing ovation from Cardinals fans Sunday in his first public appearance in St. Louis since admitting he used steroids. His news conference minutes later was much more combative. McGwire evaded questions about the criticism he's received from ex-players. "Let's all move on from this," McGwire said.

» David Beckham insisted Sunday he will not retire after the 2010 World Cup. "I've always said I'd love to carry on playing after the World Cup, and that isn't going to change," Beckham told The Associated Press. The Sun reported Saturday that Beckham was planning to retire after the World Cup.

» Kirk Hinrich missed Sunday's Bulls practice with flulike symptoms. Team officials said the veteran guard would get to the airport to fly on the team charter to Oakland, where the Bulls begin a seven-game trip Monday against Golden State.

LM Le Restaurant

4539 N. Lincoln Ave. 773-942-7585

At what's quickly becoming one of our favorite new restaurants, there are two menus, two prices and two seatings Saturday and Sunday. Make a reservation between 5-6 p.m. and you'll have the option to order the $40, three-course menu.

The $75, five-course menu is available at 6:30 p.m. and after.

Cuna

1113 W. Belmont Ave. 312-224-8588

Choose the early seating (5:30 p.m.) for a three-course meal ($75), or go with the 8 p.m. seating for a four-course dinner ($85), both with wine pairings. Chef Kendal Duque's options include sweet potato soup, saffron seafood risotto, braised beef short ribs and more. Feb. 14.

Sprout

1417 W. Fullerton Ave. 773-348-0706

Don't expect any aphrodisiacs or rose petals on chef Dale Levitski's V-Day menu. That's not the former "Top Chef" contestant's style. Instead, you'll find several fresh new appetizers, entrees and desserts incorporated into his nightly prix fixe ($60). Act fast: Sprout started receiving Valentine's reservations before New Year's. 5-11 p.m. Feb. 12-14.

Comedies ride high at Globes; 'Avatar' wins big

Despite James Cameron's best efforts, funny people stole the spotlight at the Golden Globes.

"Glee," "The Hangover" and Robert Downey Jr. garnered roaring receptions during Sunday's ceremony on NBC.

Downey, who won for the title role in "Sherlock Holmes," earned the biggest laughs with a speech in which he refused to thank anyone, including the studio that released his film.

"They needed me," he said, referring to Warner Brothers. "Avatar" was going to take us to the cleaners."

"Avatar," James Cameron's epic, earned the director a Globe and the film a drama movie award. Cameron even wrung laughs from the crowd with his best director speech.

"I'm going to try to make this as brief as I can," he said, "because frankly I have to pee."

Host Ricky Gervais set the comedy bar early on, announcing that he wasn't used to so many viewers seeing his work. "Let's face it, nor is NBC," he cracked.

Gervais got off several stinging barbs aimed at the high-profile crowd. He opened the show by repeating his Emmy Awards mocking of Steve Carell, who stars in the American version of Gervais' British hit, "The Office." While Carell pretended to be unamused, Gervais complained how fans love Carell and think he came up with all "The Office."

"I will break you," Carell mouthed to Gervais.

action comedy, while "The Hangover" was a rare win for a broad, R-rated comedy.

"I just want to thank my mom, who supported my decision to become a director when she realized I wasn't as smart as my two sisters," "Hangover" director Todd Phillips said as he was surrounded by stars Bradley Cooper, Justin Bartha and Ed Helms, among others.

In the TV categories, freshman Fox musical comedy "Glee" gave creator Ryan Murphy his first Golden Globe. The "Glee" win resonates with Chicago fans: the show is based, in part, on executive producer Ian Brennan's time in show choir at Mount Prospect High School in the Northwest Suburbs. Jane Lynch, a Chicago theater veteran, plays evil cheerleading coach Sue Sylvester on the show.

Lynch was nominated for supporting actress, but lost to Chloe Sevigny for "Big Love."

Murphy thanked Fox executives who he said believed that a musical could succeed on TV. "This is for anybody and everybody who got a wedgie in high school," he added.

Other first-time winners included Mo'Nique, who is better known for her brash comedy than dramatic roles. She won a supporting drama actress honor for "Precious: Based on the Novel 'Push' By Sapphire."

She thanked God, her director Lee Daniels and co-star Gabourey Sidibe.

"To Gabby, sister, I am in awe of you," she said. "Thank you for letting me play with you."

Another well-known comedy actress, Sandra Bullock, walked away with dramatic-acting honors for the football film "The Blind Side." She was nominated in the comedy category as well, for "The Proposal," but lost out to Meryl Streep, who was nominated twice in the category and took home the Globe for "Julie & Julia."

"I just want to say that in my long career, I've played so many extraordinary woman that I'm getting mistaken for one. I'm very clear that I'm the vessel for other people's stories and other people's lives," Streep said in a rambling speech, one of many that slowed down the proceedings.

But Gervais was always there to pick things up.

He scored huge laughs—and several gasps—when he introduced Mel Gibson by mocking the actor's history with alcohol.

"I like a drink as much as the next man," he said, "unless the next man is Mel Gibson."

MORE ZINGERS FROM THE HOST

Golden Globes host Ricky Gervais let his silly side shine during Sunday's award broadcast on NBC. Here now, a few memorable quips.

"If you think that particular version of [NBC's 'The Office'] has jumped the shark a little bit then watch the original [British version] on adult swim."

"Looking at all the faces, it reminds me of all the great work that's been done here ... by cosmetic surgeons."

"It's an honor to be here in a room full of the people I consider to be the most important people on the planet ... actors."

"This next category is a little bit of a downer to be honest. It's for writing. We all know writers get way too much credit in Hollywood."

NBC SMACKDOWN

If you thought NBC could endure its live broadcast of the Golden Globes without a mention of the late-night musical chairs situation, you were way off. Here are just a few of the barbs hurled toward the network and its decision to bump Conan O'Brien's "Tonight Show" broadcast for Jay Leno.

"I will be making the most of this opportunity. I'm not used to these sort of viewer figures. Let's face it, nor is NBC."

—RICKY GERVAIS

"Let's get on with it before NBC replaces me with Jay Leno."

—RICKY GERVAIS

"I'd just to like to thank [CBS executives] Les Moonves and Nina Tassler for believing in the 10 o'clock drama."

—JULIANNA MARGULIES

"I've seen ['Avatar' director James Cameron's] deal, the only way that he can actually make more money than that is by being hired by NBC ... or being fired by NBC."

—ARNOLD SCHWARZENEGGER

"It's not rain; it's just the sky crying for NBC."

THE GOOD

SANDRA BULLOCK

The jewel tone is stunning and sets off her luminous skin and soft dark curls perfectly. The sheerness of the full skirt gives us a hint of sexiness without being vulgar.

GETTY IMAGES

LEA MICHELE

This ball gown has a big wow factor; no one will forget this up-and-coming "Glee" star. The severe up-do is a bit much for one so young, though. Don't grow up too fast, Lea.

MAGGIE GYLLENHAAL

The intricate architecture of this dress creates a gorgeous origami effect. The peachy color is young and fresh on the "Crazy Heart" star.

VERA FARMIGA

From the elegant hairstyle to the diamond sparklers on her ears and wrist to the beautiful appliques and dramatic fishtail skirt, the "Up in the Air" star is all glamour.

TREND-SPOTTING: UP-DOS

Perhaps the moonsoonlike conditions in L.A. had actresses concerned that their hair would frizz or hang limply; better to put it up and shellac the hell out of it. There were many sleek and sophisticated or loose and lovely up-dos, including those sported by Amy Adams, from left, Marion Cotillard and Kate Hudson.

THE BAD

JENNIFER MORRISON

The color is unflattering and, as fashion sage Tim Gunn would say, "That's a whole lotta look!" Her ruffles could smother a city. Chloe Sevigny's dress is envious.

MICKEY ROURKE

After the Golden Globes ceremony, Mickey had to skedaddle to his Sunday night poker game at the Crocodile Dundee Saloon and Wild West Emporium.

CHLOE SEVIGNY

Clearly the designer bought 20 yards of lilac chiffon fabric for the "Big Love" star's gown and said, "I am using every inch of this! More ruffles. More. More!"

WORST DRESSED

DREW BARRYMORE

There was a touch of lovely old Hollywood glamour here that got lost amid the spiny sea creature on her shoulder and a puffy fanny pack thing on her hip.

GETTY IMAGES

TREND-SPOTTING: PLUNGING NECKLINES

Several actresses decided to let the girls come out and play Sunday night. Why hide these golden globes? Mariah Carey, from left, Linda Edelstein and Anna Paquin put the double-stick tape to the test and likely created unnerving moments on the red carpet every time they bent over, shook someone's hand or took a deep breath.

Lower Back Pain?

Are You or Someone You Know Suffering From Lower Back Pain?

Northwestern University is seeking volunteers who have lower back pain in order to determine where the pain is recognized in the brain. Participants will also be evaluated to determine why pain goes away for some people while it remains for others. This is a 12 month study consisting of 1 visit at the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago and 5 MRI scans at Northwestern Memorial Hospital's Olson Pavilion. All visits will take place in downtown Chicago.

Eligible participants must:

- Be 18 years or older
- Have a history of lower back pain which began 4-16 weeks ago with pain radiating into the buttocks or legs
- Be able to undergo a MRI (no pacemakers, metallic implants, or spinal implants)

Please call 312-238-0727 for more information on how you can take part in this research study.

HAPPY B-DAY!

Capricorn

Dec. 22-Jan.19

You've been going through some big changes, and there are more to come. Pluto is reminding you that you'll never achieve what you want if you don't focus on your goals. A relationship might need to take a back seat to those growing career ambitions.

Aquarius

Jan. 20-Feb. 18

With two planets in your sign you're feeling pretty good. You're not worried about the long-term romance situation because what's going on right now is pretty darn fun. You're experimenting with some new bedroom techniques and enjoying yourself immensely.

Pisces

Feb. 19-March 20

Things are flowing easier for you, thanks to Jupiter giving you some positive vibes. You'll find it easy to seduce and flirt. You'll impress sexy folks with your unique style and charming sense of humor. Don't let all that attention go to your head.

Aries

March 21-April 19

Your lover is demanding more from you, and you're feeling intimidated. You're rusty on your role-playing. You forget how to use handcuffs and leather whips. And you're blanking on that key position from the Kama Sutra. The moon says take a deep breath.

Taurus

April 20-May 20

As you settle into the New Year you're wondering if you and your partner are going to be together this time next year. A moon square is making you doubtful. Don't be pessimistic. With a positive attitude and some sensual caresses, you'll get there.

Gemini

May 21-June 21

Venus is increasing your libido. You're not into getting serious right now. You just want some steamy companionship and, afterward, some time by yourself. Don't send mixed messages to someone who is starting to fall for you in a big way.

Cancer

June 22-July 22

Peer pressure is driving you nuts. Your married friends are asking why you're not married. Family members with children are nagging you about cranking out some kids. Mercury is making it clear that sometimes, you need to tell others to shut the [bleep] up.

Leo

July 23-Aug. 22

With two planets moving opposite your sign, you're feeling at odds with yourself. You don't know what you want. And you're more restless than ever. Burn off some steam at the gym. Who knows? You might meet someone enticing along the way.

Virgo

Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Jupiter is moving opposite your sign, and it will stay in this position for an entire year. You'll be questioning everything from your living location to your job, your wardrobe and your choice of lover. It's good to ask questions. Just don't expect immediate answers.

Libra

Sept. 23-Oct. 23

Sometimes you have to break something to test it. A moon opposition is tempting you to end a relationship just to see if it ever really meant anything to you. Try to be kind about it and don't smash someone's self-esteem to smithereens.

Scorpio

Oct. 24-Nov. 21

You could be feeling passionate about two people as Mercury makes you schizophrenic. You're not sure if you're in love or in lust. All you know is that you crave attention from double directions. Give yourself time to figure out what is really going on.

Sagittarius

Nov. 22-Dec. 21

A spunky moon is heightening your need to show off. You'll indulge in some rowdy public displays of affection at a club or a bar. Or you'll showcase some cleavage or a tight butt for the benefit of an appreciative co-worker.

LUIS ARROYAVE

Still bummed that the four "Jersey Shore" cast members who had scheduled appearances in Chicago on Friday canceled? Michael Schweiger, the booking agent for every cast member but Snooki and Angelina, wrote in an e-mail to the Tribune that it wasn't the stars' fault.

"The date was postponed after we were informed by the talent that they were required [to do] an additional media day," Schweiger wrote. "The schedule overlapped ... whatever flight window we had to get them there in time. What was originally a three-day media tour [in Los Angeles] ended as six and affected several other markets as well as Chicago."

The Situation, Pauly D, Snooki and J-Woww originally were scheduled to make appearances at Chicago nightclubs on Friday night.

She can't stop watching

Jillian Harris describes "The Bachelor" and "The Bachelorette" as "mindless drama" and keeps telling herself she's going to stop watching the popular ABC reality TV shows. And yet, the former "Bachelor" contestant and "Bachelorette" star can't turn away.

"After I got done with 'The Bachelor,' the Jason [Mesnick] season, I'm like 'I'm not going anywhere near that show again,'" said Harris, who hosted a fundraiser for Haiti earthquake victims at Rockit Bar & Grill (3700 N. Clark St.) in Wrigleyville on Saturday with co-owner Billy Dec.

"After I ended up being 'The Bachelorette,' I'm like 'I'm never watching that show again.' But I'm addicted. I look forward to it all day and I make dinner and have a bottle of wine. It's mindless drama that sort of takes your mind off your life."

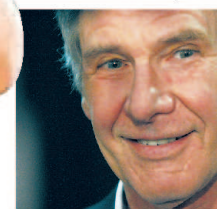

Harris and fiancé Ed Swiderski, to whom she gave the final rose on last season's "Bachelorette," appeared on the first episode of this season's "Bachelor." They met with the contestants and helped star Jake Pavelka, a contestant from Harris' "Bachelorette" season, make his first 15 selections. When asked about one of the contestants, Michelle, aka the stage five clinger, Harris said the office manager was just as obsessive in person.

"She may have a few screws loose, or she may not," said Harris, who has been living in Chicago with Swiderski since September. "But that situation really does make you lose your mind. You're so focused on one person, you're away from family and friends, you do become sort of obsessed with somebody."

Aziz Ansari of "Parks and Recreation" has a special way to get emotional for his role. The L.A. Times asked the comedic actor if it was difficult to play a recent scene in which his character spills his guts about his divorce. "Not at all," Ansari said. "I've been messaging a guy on Facebook that claims he is Daniel Day-Lewis. I think he's really Daniel and he's been getting back to me, telling me how to get emotional. He says to frown and look down a lot. So I tried a lot of that."

Tipsy talk

Guy Ritchie and Mariah Carey are bringing the booze. Ritchie hopes to try out his popular

London pub, The Punch Bowl, in the U.S., people.com reports. Carey, meanwhile, has taken to her Twitter page to announce: "ANGEL CHAMPAGNE (ROSE) by MC coming soon!" usmagazine.com reports. This follows her bubbly-fueled acceptance speech at a recent awards show. Coincidence?

Red uprising

NBC's battle with Conan O'Brien is helping both sides in at least one way: "The Tonight Show" ratings are up—big time. Friday's ratings were 50 percent higher in large markets than they've been all season, according to the Nielsen people. Apparently, viewers are on Team Conan.

Payin' the man

Nicolas Cage continues to suffer tax woes to the tune of $14 million. Cage tells people.com that he has paid "at least $70 million in taxes" and now owes $14 million "due to a recent legal situation." He adds that he is "under new business management and am happy to say that I am current for 2009."

Couple update

Megan Fox and Brian Austin Green are giving engagement a second try, eonline.com reports. Green responded Saturday to a fan on Twitter who asked if he was married with kids by writing: "[I'm] engaged and have a son from a previous relationship."

The on-again, off-again couple were photographed kissing at an event in Canada late last year.
